About the author

Susan Holt is a bubbly and passionate actress and writer living in Porirua. After studying linguistics, she followed her dream, and moved to Sydney where she completed a two-year acting course. During that sojourn, she discovered a talent for writing.

Susan is currently running both an acting group and a writing group for her own nefarious purposes while trying to get some actual writing done.

Susan's next book is a full novel titled The Heart Casts No Shadow, due for release mid-2019.

Praise for Catching the Last Tram

"subtle opening, spectacular finish... I couldn't put it down." MERRYN CORCORAN - AUTHOR OF THE SILENT VILLAGE

"Catching the Last Tram delivers you to the intersection of sweet intrigue and edgy fantasy. This is an assured and satisfying debut novella from an actor-turned-author who understands the subtleties of building drama." WILLIAM HENRY - AUTHOR OF THE JULIAN CALENDAR

"A journey to another time - an absolutely charming mystery." KRIS PEARSON - AUTHOR OF THE BOAT BUILDER'S BED

Beth's commute could lead to love – but something dark is on the tracks

After moving house, lonely librarian Beth meets Isaac – a handsome man with timeless manners – on her way to work. Sharing the same antiquated tram day after day, the pair become close and Beth suspects she's falling in love.

But Isaac has a secret that threatens their budding romance. Something dark and as magical as the tram that picks her up every morning and evening.

Why does he suddenly push her away? Does he really not care for her? How could she have got the signals so wrong?

Then Isaac and the tram go missing and Beth begins to discover the truth. But it might be too late...
